Designation of THE PERSON OF TRUST

Your rights at the Centre Françoise MINKOWSKA

When you are treated, the Françoise Minkowska Centre is obliged to offer you the opportunity to appoint a person of trust (Article L.1111-6 of the Public Health Code)

1 Why I choose to designate
A person you trust?

Since the law of 4 March 2002 on patients' rights, health establishments are obliged to offer you the opportunity to appoint a person of trust during any treatment.
The designation of the person of trust is not an obligation, but an option offered to you..

YOUR TRUSTED PERSON:

- Will be your spokesperson with the health professionals who care for you. It will be consulted as a matter of priority, when any questions are raised about the implementation, continuation or cessation of treatment, in the event that your state of health does not allow you to give your opinion or share your decisions. Medical decision-making remains the responsibility of health professionals after having learned of your wishes from your trusted person. His testimony takes precedence over any other testimony (family, spouse, etc.).
- Can accompany you in your procedures and attend your medical interviews in order to possibly help you in your decisions.

Your person of trust does not have access to your medical file (unless you provide them with an express mandate to do so). If you do not wish to have certain information shared with them, it will remain confidential, regardless of the circumstances. On the other hand, it will have access to certain information deemed necessary to formulate what you would have wanted.

2 Who can nominate
a person you trust?

Any adult can appoint a person of trust.
For people under guardianship, an authorisation from the judge or the family council is required.
If you do not appoint a person of trust, the doctor will consult your family or loved ones.

3 Who can I nominate
as a person of trust?

Any adult who is not subject to a guardianship measure, whom you trust to carry out this mission: one of your parents, your spouse, your partner, one of your relatives, your GP, etc.
The person you designate as a support person can also be the person you have designated as the "person to be notified".

4 How to designate my trusted person?

The person of trust is freely designated, in writing, at any time at admission or during your care. You can only nominate one person at a time.
His appointment must be a well-thought-out decision, without haste.
A specific form is attached to this leaflet. It must be completed, signed and handed in to the Centre's team.

5 The agreement of my trusted person
Is it necessary?

You must inform the person you have chosen of his or her role and obtain his or her agreement and signature before sending his or her contact details to the Françoise MINKOWSKA Centre via the nomination form.

6 Can I change
a person you trust?

Your designation of the person of trust is valid until you decide to revoke him/her. In this case, you must inform the Centre and the previously designated support person.
If you wish, you can appoint a new trusted person.

7 What's the difference between the person to be notified and the person of trust?

The person to be notified is the person who will be contacted by the medical and care team, during your care, in the event of particular events of an organisational or administrative nature (transfer to another health establishment, end of care, etc.).
The person to be notified does not have access to your medical information and does not participate in medical decisions.
The role of the person of trust is to accompany you throughout your care in your procedures, medical interviews, and to be your spokesperson with the medical teams in the event that you are no longer able to express yourself. Your trusted person can be the same as the one to be notified.
